Jeff Kreisler '08
1-4 Aug (Not 11), 18:10, The Stand

A hard-fought campaign to make the world better through humour.

Jeff Kreisler's specialty is "Comedy Against Evil". Winner of the Bill Hicks Spirit Award for Thought-Provoking Comedy and writer for Comedy Central and CNN, Kreisler attacks American politics and culture with passion, absurdity, and hope.

Kreisler collaborated with Spinal Tap's Tony Hendra and Monty Python's Terry Jones on the controversial new parody, "My Wall Street Journal," and is a cast and writing staff member of "The Daily Show"-creator Lizz Winstead's "Shoot the Messenger". He's also author of the upcoming Harper Collins book, "Get Rich Cheating".

He's been showcased at this year's Glasgow International Comedy Festival, as well as the Freedom Cinema, New York, and San Francisco Comedy Festivals. He's worked with legends like Dick Gregory, Robin Williams, and Greg Proops. Kreisler is the bright, comic voice of hope without illusions.

Kreisler recently performed live with real '08 contenders, Hillary Clinton, Barack Obama, and John Edwards. Less brittle, but no less angry than those that have come before, he's an ex-lawyer and Ivy League graduate. His absurdist style brings political comedy into the present.

With an upbeat sense of possibility, Kreisler blends commentary, social insight, and unpredictable theatrical rage about the erosion of democracy and the future of our culture. You'll love spending time with him even as you despair of the world as seen by his uncompromising eyes.

"A highlight" – The New York Times

"A welcome reminder of a time when comedy cut a lot closer to the issues of the day than most comics now dare." - Dallas Morning News

"A slightly demented, extremely animated set that attacks everything..." - San Francisco Chronicle
